

CALL FOR FIBER ARTISTS!

Women Pulling at The Threads of Social Discourse

The Jewish Museum of Milwaukee and The Contemporary Art Modern Project (CAMP), based in Miami, are inviting textile artists to submit works for a new Midwest-focused incarnation of The CAMP's signature exhibition, Women Pulling at the Threads of Social Discourse, coming to the Jewish Museum Milwaukee in summer 2023.

This will be the third run of the exhibition exploring the effects of legislation, historic and recent, in the United States on contemporary women's issues through fabric, and featuring predominantly female artists, delving into their relationship with themselves and their communities at the intersections of femininity, race, history, and feminist sociopolitics.

The exhibition explores life experience and civic duty through what is often, improperly, considered to be the tamest realm of fine art: fiber. Artists who have participated tackle the perspectives and rights of those who are not white, not male, and not "American," who are repeatedly belittled and discarded. In most cases, the artists themselves belong to one, or all, of these groups.

We are asking those who submit to create 40 x 60 inch textile/fiber works weaving in one or more of the following themes: legislation in the United States, civil rights, the importance of voting, bodily autonomy and reproductive rights, identity/cultural autonomy, immigration, gender equality.

While the show's title refers to women, non-binary and male-identifying artists are welcome to apply as well.

Submission requirements:

- Images and/or sketches of proposed submission; textile. Images must be high resolution. All entries must be submitted by April 10, 2023.
- An artist statement explaining submitted work and artist intention.

Final images are due no later than May 15, 2023.

Artwork must be delivered between June 7 – 13, 2023, to:

Jewish Museum Milwaukee
1360 N. Prospect Ave., Milw., WI

Entries can be sent directly to:
